This is not a sales presentation. June 12, 2008 – 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. 11:30 to noon – Networking Time 12:00 to 1:00 p.m. – Speaker Presentation |
| About the Presenter | Karen has presented to a variety of organizations and audiences on energy topics including energy economics and policy, peak oil, climate change, energy efficiency and conservation, renewable energy options and incentives and tax credits available to Oregon businesses and individuals. She has been an Adjunct Professor, teaching at OSU, for 14 years. She holds an MBA and MSPH from the University of Utah. |
| About the Topic | It seems that everywhere you turn, every conversation you're in, the issue of energy comes up. Prices are up, supplies are down; food shortages are causing people to blame the production of biofuels; green house gases have become a type of tradable commodity; and the way in which we have been living and doing business appears to be on the brink of evolutionary change. This presentation will cover the status of energy today and what the future may hold. It will also provide some ideas and opportunities for solutions, and will include the popular energy tax credits and other incentives the Oregon Department of Energy can provide to Oregon businesses. |
| About the Brown Bag Lunch Series | Please join us for our series of Free Brown Bag Lunches. Our goal is to provide monthly programs that allow you to network and learn from experts in fields that will help you become and stay successful. We are privileged to have Karen come from Salem and take the time to share in her area of expertise for this presentation. We hope to see you there. |
